Hurting and Hungry project serves poverty-level and homeless individuals and families in South Central Los Angeles with grocery distribution and served meals and snacks. In addition, the project seeks to assist clients to access other existing resources by providing case management services. H&H has established itself as a key community-based institution that works closely with community residents and serves those most in need.

The Greater West Hollywood Food Coalition (GWHFC) is a volunteer, grassroots organization that seeks to combat hunger in Los Angeles. GWHFC has been distributing hot meals 365 days a year since 1987. The project uses donated surplus food from businesses and restaurants and volunteer labor to provide these meals. Through meals, medical screenings, and service referrals, GWHFC provides essential support to poverty-level and homeless individuals.
